False and rescally statements have been cliculated through the country that forcible resistance has been made to the rere nue officers in Florida, Georgia, and elsewhere, the object of the authors and indenets of the pestilent calumny being in part to secure the calling out of the negro-militia in order that these allies of Radiosi-San Juan inland independently of the river.

The supply of water in the lake is believed to be abundant for canal purposes. The discharge into the San Juan is, at low water, about twelve thousand cubic feet to the second, and at extreme high water about twenty-three thousand. The cost of a canal by this route, including artificial harbers in both oceans, is roundly estimated at a hundred millions of dollars. This is certainly an insmense sum of money, but not nearly so much as the Darien route would cost. By which of the two routes success would be the more surely accompilabled, we know not. Skillful engineers must decide that question.
